Correspondent's Guide - General

The aim of this three page guide is to highlight some of the points that will help you produce the copy that will make the Editor smile and stop him from moaning in a return email (He's growly, but quite friendly!). Please be sure to read and understand all that follows because these are the most important things to remember:-

Email Address: The correct email to send all entries to is wattontimes@gmail.com

Phone Number: Because of a monumental error by BT my desk phone number has changed to 01953 571990, the old number has gone. The mobile remains the same for the moment but I anticipate that changing in the next little while. Keep an eye on the paper for notice of changes.

Copy: Please, please, please, please send all entries in some kind of electronic format rather than a printed page or handwritten note.

Deadline: Please make a careful note of the Deadline which is at Noon on the 12th of the month before the month of publication. If the 12th happens to be a Sunday then the Deadline is the Monday immediately after the 12th.

Deadline: The definition of Deadline here is that it represents the last date and time that copy received will be considered for publication. Please be early with copy. Arrival before the Deadline does NOT guarantee inclusion in the paper. Page space is allocated on a first come, first served basis.

Formatting: Please do not format the text using bold or italics etc., because the very first thing I do, is to strip all that from the text.

- Remember that your carefully laid out piece is going to be placed on the page in a newspaper column. One simply cannot lay text out in a meaningful way within the confines of a column.
- Please be sure to send text either directly into an email (my preferred way) or a word processing document. e.g. Word, Pages or even Notepad.
- Please do not send text in PDF format or, much worse, as a scanned picture. Items like this may well be rejected.

Pictures: Pictures are more than welcomed! But please send in unedited images (i.e. as they come off the camera) at full size and attached to the email. If you have been sent the image from someone else make sure they have sent it to you full size. It should be at least 1MB in size. Most email clients will try and reduce the size of pictures which made them faster to send (in the old days!). Unfortunately this ruins them for print purposes.

The inclusion of any submitted picture is an editorial decision based on space available, picture subject and the quality. If you are not sure about anything, please ask. My starting point is always to try and be as helpful as I can!

Advertising Your Club & Charitable Special Events

A humorous(?) guide – with a serious message – the right way to use the Watton & Wayland Times to promote your club or your fund raising or charitable event . . .

Of all the processes associated with producing the paper, an organisation advertising itself or an event is the one thing that causes most difficulties for the Editor. It can put him in a bad mood. Some have said it is difficult to know when he is in a good mood, since he has a naturally miserable face. But honestly, he is usually a happy, easy going chap.

If you feel you want try poking a bear with a sore head, then may I suggest a good way of doing that would be to fold up an inkjet printout of a poster with lots of tiny text on it and push it through the letterbox of Adcocks! Another way would be to send a poor quality scan of the poster that someone has produced and leave it at that.

Electronic artwork of a good quality poster is less irritating, but cramming too much information in makes them unreadable at the size they can be reproduced at without cost.

Please don't do that.

Why not? Well, were I to publish a paper with pages just covered in posters, that would not be an entertaining read. And space on the page is very expensive. There always was, and will be, a strict limit on the size of free adverts for clubs and charitable events, which is 6cm by 9cm. That was, and is, because that size advert costs businesses up to £40, so I will be introducing some additional rules for charitable event advertising.

What do I need to do to keep the Editor smiling?

First and foremost, write an article of up to say, five hundred(ish) words about the who, what, why, when and where of the club or event. Pictures are also welcome, but do read carefully the paragraph about pictures on page one. Articles (and pictures if space allows) will always be included free of charge; they are what make the paper a good read. Include a poster in your email as well, and IF I have space, I will consider printing it subject to the next paragraph, providing you have submitted an article with all the information in.

If your organisation or club is entirely charitable, and the event requires readers to buy a ticket, and you want me to print a block advert of 6cm by 9cm, be it a poster or whatever, then I will be charging £10. Please note I will NOT charge to include an article promoting your event; that is entirely free of charge.

If your event is wholly charitable then send in an article and there will be no problem. Send in a poster and you may be asked to contribute to the cost of page space, if available, to print it if it is a ticketed event or a club that has subs. If you want a bigger advert printed, talk to the Editor and he will try and help as much as he can.

Non, & Partly Charitable Event Adverts

This page concerns events such as fetes, shows or markets where 100% of the profits do NOT go to charity.

This is even more difficult problem because business that advertise are the people who pay for the production of the paper, and if I use their support to help others make money, perhaps from their usual customers, then that is clearly going to give the paper a very short life, and that is because even I wouldn't do pay to help others 'poach' my customers!

Worse still for the poor old Editor, it is not as simple as the above implies because sometimes there is a clear community benefit even though there is no obvious 'charitable' benefit.

In consequence such events are treated on a case by case basis by the Editor, weighing up a number of factors, not all of which will be obvious to the organiser wondering why the miserable so and so, said 'no'. It is difficult to make decisions to cover all eventualities. But the rule of thumb is that if participants make a profit and there is no charitable benefit from an event then advertising is not free.

If an event does make a contribution to a named Charity, then the organisers will need to tell the Editor what percentage of any profit goes to that Charity and what percentage goes to organisers and stall holders. Advertising cost will be adjusted accordingly.

I hope you understand the reasoning behind all of the above. It is based on the bitter experience of running a paper for nearly 26 years and having it fail because it simply could not support itself in times of financial stress. A mistake I do not intend to repeat.
